Corals of Creativity

The Hour of Code is a global movement that will be happening again this year during the week of December 5th-11th. Our technology teachers will be teaching lessons and allowing students time to code in technology and we would also love to encourage you to get involved. Below is a link of resources that can be done with or without technology. This information has been shared with our classroom teachers and it is our hope that parents will also utilize the shared resources to allow students time at home to do these activities! Please take some time within the next few days to check out the video and resources link. This is an AMAZING STEM opportunity for our students!
